

PATIENCE IS A VIRTUE

By Fei Cochrane

Copyright © Fei Cochrane, All Rights Reserved

After graduating from college, I worked as a high school teacher for one year. After that, I had the opportunity to travel abroad for work. I thoroughly enjoyed my first experience riding an airplane to travel abroad. It was a wonderful experience. At that point, I realized that I would really enjoy seeing the world.

It has been an absolute pleasure to meet so many people of diverse cultures and colors, which I enjoy and love very much. It is also my privilege to have friends from all over the world. However, I have only one place where I feel at home, and that is my permanent where I go home after my travels. This is the place where I retreat, relax, and work. As my grounding place, my home provides comfort and stability.

The purpose of this blog is to share with you how to be patient and persistent in order to be successful in your travels. This blog will convince you that patience is indeed a virtue.

➤ PATIENCE IS ESSENTIAL WHEN TRAVELING

A successful trip requires more than just funds; it also requires patience and perseverance. You begin by gathering items to bring with you. There are limitations to these items, you cannot bring your entire home with you. To embark on a successful journey, discipline, patience, and proper planning are necessary. Getting ready for a journey can be a nightmare without them.

Collect all possible items you wish to bring with you, but do not pack them yet. Be sure to allow yourself sufficient time to prepare. The limitation process is the best way to proceed until you have collected all the necessary items that you can bring. Don't rush the process, be patient and take your time. Once you have completed the task, you can begin packing. Doing so will make your preparation enjoyable.

Next, you will travel to the airport, then enter the airport itself, and then proceed with what to do once inside the airport. It is true that traveling is fun, but there are many preparations to make and procedures to follow. When traveling internationally, you are required to arrive at the airport at least three hours before departure. It is therefore imperative that you adhere to this procedure in order to avoid being left behind by your aircraft. Departures leave at the scheduled departure time and will not wait for you.

As soon as you arrive at the airport, you will likely have to wait in line. As a result, your patience will be tested from here on out. Follow the procedures to enter the airport while patiently waiting in line. Prepare your ID or passport ahead of time to avoid delaying others who are in line behind you. Once you have successfully entered the airport, your patience will again be tested. You will likely have to wait in line to check in for your flight once again. It is important that you remain patient, be kind and respectful to others in order to successfully complete your journey.

You have now reached the gate where you will enter the aircraft. Your seat number or row number will be called from here. It is important that you wait until they call your seat number and do not rush in and push others in order to get into the aircraft. Once again, please be patient and wait your turn. The next thing you know, you are sitting in your assigned seat on board the aircraft.

The interaction with your fellow passengers, including the stewardess and pilot, will once again test your patience. For some travelers, aircraft seats can be very uncomfortable. You may feel cramped and confined in the small seat area. There is no option to request a larger seat or to change the area of the aircraft since all seats are of equal size except for those in first class or business class. For some passengers, even comfort seats are not comfortable. As a result, you will have fellow travelers who feel uncomfortable testing their patience and this often results in anger. Whenever possible, it is best not to engage in an argument or an angry conversation with your fellow travelers. Avoid trying to comfort them or giving up your own seat. There are trained stewardesses who can handle incidents such as these, so let them assist this individual. You should remain calm and refrain from engaging in any abusive conversation.

If you are that passenger who is not comfortable and feeling angry, try to be accommodating to others. Let the other passengers finish boarding and settle into their assigned seats. You should then contact one of the stewardesses and inform her of the situation. Whenever possible, they will work with you to find a way to make you feel comfortable. Fighting with them in such a confined space is not a good idea. Whenever possible, they will work with you to find a solution. Communicate with them calmly and do not let anger get the better of you. Be patient, drink water, take deep breaths, and stay calm.

Your arrival marks the end of this journey and the final event you need to prepare for. Again, please be patient, avoid rushing, and be considerate of the other travelers. You will be rewarded with an exciting and joyful journey.

➤ PATIENCE IS ESSENTIAL AT HOME

As we begin our daily routine, the first step is to prepare our home. Make sure it is safe and no appliances are running unattended, that no cooking is taking place in the kitchen, that trashcans are cleared, pets are fed (if you have pets), that your children are ready for school (if you have children), your work lunch is prepared, and any other mundane tasks that you need to complete before you depart for work. The key to completing all these tasks easily without feeling overwhelmed is patience.

It is important to communicate freely, honestly, and patiently with your husband or wife at home. If you are not understanding something about what your partner, husband, wife, or any of your family members are saying, consider it more carefully. In the event that your understanding is unclear, please ask nicely and patiently. It is best not to jump to conclusions without obtaining clarification from the other party involved. There is no benefit to keeping it quiet to avoid argument or impatient conversations. Ensure that you are calm, relaxed, and prepared to approach the other person with patience and an open mind.

Communication is best achieved by taking your time to listen attentively to the other person involved. Be sure to look the person in the eye and pay attention to what they are saying. This allows you to concentrate on applying critical thinking skills, thereby assisting you in resolving matters more easily. Critical thinking skills are essential for understanding how others feel, what they are thinking, and what their true nature is. It is very important to listen carefully to understand the other person's point of view with the intent of understanding it. Focusing on the conversation will enable you to also open your own way of thinking, allowing you to respond correctly and appropriately. Conversations can sometimes turn into arguments. The reason for this is that either one of the parties involved is not listening, or both parties are not willing to hear or understand each other's perspective.

Keep in mind that everyone's "Home" is very important. The suggestions that I have provided in the above paragraphs are the key to a happy home life. In particular, when you have children involved, you should be patient, communicate effectively, and be able to think critically. As a result, there will be no broken homes or broken marriages. In order to maintain a happy home and prevent painful separations, a diplomatic approach, accompanied by a great deal of patience, is crucial.

➤ PATIENCE IS ESSENTIAL AT WORK

Having a stable job is an integral part of our way of life. You may work for a company or be self-employed. There is something honorable and enjoyable about all jobs, regardless of their nature. Choosing a job that you enjoy and have an interest in is the most appropriate choice.

In the event that you have no other choice but to take a job in order to survive, you should accept the job honorably and be grateful that you have it. You may end up living on the streets if you do not have it. You can make it something you enjoy the most by exercising great patience and perseverance. In order to achieve your dream career, you should continue to work in this field until a new door opens for you.

Regardless of your situation, be patient and be ambitious, and keep your dream in sight. Don't limit yourself to one type of employment because it pays well and provides for your needs. It is important to be ambitious in order to move up the ladder.

Communicating with people on a daily basis is a challenging aspect of working in an industry that involves communication with people. It could be working at a grocery store, a restaurant, in an office environment, providing technical support, working at a bank, etc. No two customers are the same, whether you meet them on the job site or over the phone or by email correspondence. A difficult situation or an unpleasant conversation is most likely to arise. There is no doubt that you will encounter customers who are happy, unhappy, impatient, ungrateful, depressed, insane, bipolar, narcissistic, etc. regardless of the environment you are in at work. These individuals require patience and understanding on your part. Listen attentively and with a great deal of patience rather than responding in kind to the situation. You will not benefit from rushing to resolve the issue. If you wish to get to the root of the problem, take your time to listen patiently and attentively.

Be patient, be kind, and be respectful of others, regardless of the environment in which you find yourself. By doing so, you will be rewarded with the same. As a result of being happy at work, you will return home with a smile, thus providing a pleasant atmosphere and energy in your home.

Work issues should not be brought home. Keep it at work and leave it there. On your next work day, return to the issue and attempt to resolve it once more. Keeping your home happy, loving, peaceful, and peaceful is one of the most important things you can do for it.

➤ THERE ARE OTHER PLACES IN WHICH PATIENCE IS REQUIRED

There are many places where patience is required, including sports complexes and your neighborhood, where you must interact with your neighbors. Beaches, farmers markets, farms, entertainment venues, cemeteries, etc. In addition to dealing with humans, you will need patience when dealing with animals as they are unable to relate to you. It is especially important to bear this in mind when visiting a farm or a zoo. It is imperative that you wait patiently for the animals to approach you. In some cases, they will not even approach you due to their fear of humans. In order to overcome a difficult situation, it is important to exercise great patience and understanding wherever you may be.

In a farm, where plants need to be cared for, patience is also required. In general, plants require water, regardless of their species, but you tend to overwater them in the belief that the more water they have, the more likely they are to survive. It is possible that they require more sunlight in order to grow more effectively. At times, insects may be responsible for causing plants to become sick and unable to grow properly. It is your responsibility to tend to the plants and vegetables in accordance with their needs. It is important that you maintain patience and understanding of what they are.

➤ PATIENCE IS A VIRTUE INDEED

A virtue consists of both intellectual and moral characteristics. There is a quality of excellence in it that can contribute to the improvement of people's lives. The concept of "Patience is a virtue" is characterized by excellence and professionalism. As an end goal or fundamental principle, it is good for humanity and is valued by all.

RETURN TO HOME PAGE

Click here to Subscribe

